Update on Kelvin Vickers

Last week, I shared comments from my friend Lynn Mazurkiewicz, widow of Rochester Police Officer Anthony Mazurkiewicz, regarding the actions of Kelvin Vickers while in the New York State Department of Corrections.

Kelvin Vickers was sentenced to Life Without the Possibility of Parole approximately one year ago, consecutive to multiple life sentences for the murders of Rochester Police Officer Anthony Mazurkiewicz, Richard Colling, MyJel Rand, and the aggravated attempted murder of Rochester Police Officer Sino Seng.

In just one year of his life sentence, Vickers was transferred between several facilities: from Monroe County Jail to Great Meadow Correctional Facility, then to Sing Sing Correctional Facility, followed by Coxsackie Correctional Facility, and Clinton Correctional Facility, before being sent to his current residence, which is Attica Correctional Facility, a maximum-security prison.

When I first saw the video of Kelvin Vickers violently assaulting a corrections officer, I was not surprised. I immediately recognized Vickers, and I am relieved that the officer survived and is recovering from the assault. I know what Vickers is capable of, and we are fortunate he is not facing charges for aggravated murder once again. On Friday, I felt it necessary to speak to the Spectrum News and News 10 about Kelvin Vickers and the threat he poses inside the Department of Corrections.

His history of violence is well-documented. While at Monroe County Jail, he was found in possession of a homemade shank. Kelvin Vickers poses a threat to everyone he encounters within the New York State Department of Corrections, just as he does to the public at large.

Homicide Update

To Date 2025:

City of Rochester Total: 6

Monroe County Total: 8

I sincerely hope that Kelvin Vickers does not kill anyone while incarcerated, but his criminal record gives little reason for optimism. Earlier this week, WHEC News 10 interviewed Officer Corey Clark, the corrections officer who was attacked by Vickers. Officer Clark revealed that the day before the assault, Kelvin Vickers made a phone call in which he stated he would kill the first corrections officer who allowed him out of his cell. This is absolutely terrifying. You can visit <https://www.whec.com/local/prison-rape-sheet-reveals-more-violent-behavior-by-cop-killer-kelvin-vickers/> to watch the entire interview.

Kelvin Vickers is a monster. From Boston to Rochester and across various Department of Corrections facilities, he leaves a trail of destruction and violence. He was convicted of killing three individuals—people who had families and communities that loved them—and he nearly killed a fourth person within a 48-hour period. This hardened criminal shows no empathy, compassion, or humanity.

Life without the possibility of parole was, and remains, the only appropriate sentence for Kelvin Vickers. We did our part to protect the community from his brutality. Now it is up to the State of New York to ensure the safety of everyone inside these facilities, including the corrections officers, all staff members, and the fellow inmates of Kelvin Vickers.

To Lynn, and the families of all of his victims, my heart is with all of you.
